Thank you, Lauren. I appreciate your email. I also appreciate your civil tone. Steve acted like a bully right out of the gate in this investigation, and that does not play well with me. Our chance encounter this afternoon makes me think that your direct involvement might be mutually beneficial.

Anyway, I just throw that out there for your consideration. And I look forward to hopefully meeting you in person soon.

Regards,
Bill

We'll consult internally and get back to you promptly. I believe the delay in responding had to do with a spurt of activity in some unrelated matters that distracted us from your pending request.

LER

Lauren:

No problem -- I will delete it. It would be great if we could firm something up for next week, though, as I'm concerned about trying to get folks to keep holding the dates.

Thanks,
Bill

Bill,

I fear the perils of using a blackberry have caught up with me today. Please disregard the email below.

Thanks,

Due to your failure to respond to my correspondence in a timely manner, February 22 is off the table. We are still available on February 27 or 28, but I will need to hear from you promptly this time.
